Following ongoing grower support, EP Grain has appointed a staff member to serve the western Eyre Peninsula.

“To ensure our farmer customers continue to receive the highest level of service possible, we have not only appointed an additional grain accumulator but we have also expanded our offices,” EP Grain general manager Tim Burrow said.

Tom Wake (pictured right), who comes to EP Grain from the graduate link program, will focus on recruitment and potential customers in the Thevenard District Zone for the coming season.

Mr Wake has moved to Port Lincoln from his home on a sheep station near Shark Bay, in the far south of Western Australia.

For the upcoming harvest season, EP Grain also plans to appoint an additional person to support its office administrator during that very busy time.

“To accommodate the growing team as well as give them the room to meet with small groups of farmers, we have expanded our office at 7 Bligh Street, Port Lincoln, taking over the vacated florist shop next door. We now have twice the amount of space to work in and have also made room to meet with our customers,” Mr Burrow said.
